Vic and Pacman weren't ruined by "keepin' it real.

I wish I could tell him, and other sufferers, exactly how I got a grip on things, but it's not an easy thing to quantify or describe.

Talking about it helps.

We cannot even clean up our own yard; what made us think we could clean up theirs?

I agree with your basic assertion that criminality in the ghetto is a means to an economic end in the absence of other, legitimate economic means.

and this is nothing new, twas ever thus.

This might not be the most elegant thing I've ever said, and I don't really know of any way to prove it, but I'm gonna say it anyway.

I have met three people in my life similarly afflicted, but not one of them ever seemed to realize that they had a problem, at least they never let on that they did.

The author also runs the excellent adult children of BPDed parents online.

Talking about it helps.

That's easy to remember because a conversation upset her when our daughter was three days old, and she hasn't been back since.

No money, no guns, no rims, no bling.

which to someone on the other side of the glass manifests itself as highly manipulative behavior.

We cannot even clean up our own yard; what made us think we could clean up theirs?

"Oh, but Cool Papa Bell, these people are poor and disenfranchised!

My life is my own, that's about all there is to it.

It's no fun to be stalked.

Goals helped motivate me; work helped force me out of my own head.

I've learned to reassure myself, and talk myself down from the extremes of my moods, instead of throwing myself on the mercy of others.

But I can be very difficult to be around.

This is what I was taught growing up.

one trait that is a hallmark of BPD is that those afflicted with it oscillate wildly and for no discernible reason between that hypersensitivity and a state of nearly total emotional dissociation.

The American extremist faith in individuality is the single strongest cultural affectation for maintaining the status quo.

It doesn't matter if you've prefaced the criticism with a ton of praise, the moment is the only thing they're capable of.

He's what we used to call "An Asshole.

Keepin' it real was taking all those successes, and trying to maintain your black background.

I have yet to have it keep me from anything.

I've learned to reassure myself, and talk myself down from the extremes of my moods, instead of throwing myself on the mercy of others.

She was so sweet and nice at times, like I really thought we could have had a great relationship, but it was like she had this evil, ugly person inside her that she couldn't keep under control.

Grand-Ma, did you write this?

You're mostly right, if you remove the painfully loaded language.

On living with a mental illness.

Statistics work both ways.

talking about getting a pregnancy test, getting checked for STDs, etc.

My father and my older brother are both BPD.

Whether suffering BPD from the inside or suffering from a loved one's BPD, it's no bed of roses.

The author also runs the excellent adult children of BPDed parents online.

It's not a bad thing to be unashamed of your roots.

I feel sorry for him.

My father I have entirely given up on, which is a difficult thing to do as the youngest, especially considering how much I used to idolize him.

"Don't be a sellout" means different things depending on where you come from.

and this is nothing new, twas ever thus.

but not so much that I'd like to be his friend.

cutting behavior, in particular, is described as an expression of their desire to break through that pane of glass and allow themselves to "feel" something.

Which is not to say some legitimate capitalists aren't morally bankrupt.

Sure, they have to choose to not drink, but the rest of the family can help and support them and can work with them to achieve sobriety.

Stalking is a huge BPD issue.

It is in the emotions department that people with these four disorders are most dangerous to others and themselves.

We don't even know how to make a start let alone find a solution and the fact is that the current administration couldn't give a less of a fuck about it.

Everyone's a little bit like this: we all would prefer people be nice rather than mean.

listened to death metal?

There is then also the issue of legal and moral obligation that exists within the family.

Then they assured me that unfair does not mean impossible.

I had another diagnosis.

He's what we used to call "An Asshole.

Am I missing something?

There have been complaints that the term has sometimes become a catch-all.

Most wage earners either worked in local factories or on the docks.

I would like to see some discussion on how to fix the problem, as it obviously won't go away on its own.

jokeefe, amazing comment.

That seems like wavering in and out of being a conscious human.

I wish that notion could be conveyed to black kids today.

But I firmly disbelieve that any living person is ever beyond help.

I've read extensively on the disorder, and I've come to understand a lot about how my mind works.

Hence a bidding war for qualified black job candidates that drives salaries up, up, up.

Sarcasm aside, how is it that this article from MSNBC tells us anything new?

It's stupid, and I hate it.

You're mostly right, if you remove the painfully loaded language.

BPD, like any of the clinical disorders is on a continuum and is almost always comorbid with other issues, like addiction, PTSD, depression, mania etc.

Thanks for listening.

My father and my older brother are both BPD.

If drugs were legalized, they'd find a natural price that would be a great deal lower than it is now.

The author wants his 'friends' to accept him for who he is, and for strangers to call him up and feel sorry for him.

She knows when she is doing it.

It's going to be like this, or worse, for generations to come.

That kind of self-harming without more extreme psychosis was how the notion of "borderline" came into play, and some find it a regrettably irrelevant naming convention.

It didn't exactly happen yesterday.
Combined with the complete ontological rejection of cultural forces you can see why institutionalized oppression would thrive.
Distancing myself from people who provoked problematic behavior was important, and so was an antidepressant I still take daily.
I may not even vote any more.
I lost people by hurting them terribly.
so why are blacks failing?
Diagnosed male BPDs are less common than female BPDs.
But I firmly disbelieve that any living person is ever beyond help.
A few months back I watched a kid launching bullets arbitrarily into a crowded intersection in broad daylight and laugh while he did it.
Is this totally wrong?
Combined with the complete ontological rejection of cultural forces you can see why institutionalized oppression would thrive.
there is nothing unique about it, other than the motifs.
We cannot even clean up our own yard; what made us think we could clean up theirs?
Pre-war terraced slum housing that lacked basic amenities like hot water, indoor bathrooms, etc.
I may not even vote any more.
So, sometimes friends or I will say this as a departing phrase.
But why shouldn't that be on the table?
It's very literally not our problem.
Economic background may be a larger factor, but a white guy is still going to get more respect in intellectual areas than a black guy.
In that sense, their fears and vulnerabilities are completely realized in the reactions of the people around them.
But I firmly disbelieve that any living person is ever beyond help.
Other than hoping people will wake up, I'm out of ideas.
In my industry, if you are African-American and you are good, the playing field is tilted very heavily in your favor.
He's what we used to call "An Asshole."
In many respects she is a delightful and caring woman, but she is also irresistibly drawn to men who abuse her, again and again and again.
Till eventually he beat the shit out of her so bad he fled town.
jokeefe, amazing comment.
But she is completely unable to stop this behaviour.
Nothing could be further from the truth.
What had been, up to that point, some occasional behavioral problems and emotional quirks became more intense, started to solidify and gather speed.
This isn't all bad: if it's a nice moment, they feel like they're on top of the world.
which to someone on the other side of the glass manifests itself as highly manipulative behavior.
Axis III identifies relevant physical diseases and conditions.
And you know what happen to them?
I have yet to have it keep me from anything.
It is in the emotions department that people with these four disorders are most dangerous to others and themselves.
That mix of charm and frantic neediness and rage and seductiveness and self-hatred is pretty pathognomic.
I've learned what I need to watch about myself and what needs and urges I need to keep in check.

That's easy to remember because a conversation upset her when our daughter was three days old, and she hasn't been back since.
They may feel guilt or shame but are unable to respond to those feelings appropriately.
She knows when she's about to do it.

Now that is bullshit.

Then they will apologize profusely, you will begin to heal and they will break it again.

I lost people by hurting them terribly.

Unfortunately, there's not much I can do about this as long as my dad still has to call his only kid on the sly.

I wish that notion could be conveyed to black kids today.

I've encountered plenty of racism in my life.

Isn't it just recycling of the same old thing?

She just up and decided I was evil one day, and barred me from contacting her.

There's absolutely nothing else like it in the world.

I wish that notion could be conveyed to black kids today.

I had another diagnosis.

Figuring out how to maintain some kind of relationship with her has been difficult, to say the least.
